

Andrew Haughwout joined the Research Department of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York in January 2000 and was appointed head of the Bank's newly created Microeconomic and Regional Studies group in July 2005. Prior to joining the New York Fed, Mr. Haughwout served as Assistant Professor at Princeton University's Woodrow Wilson School from 1992 to 2000, where he directed the Urban and Regional Planning program from 1998-1999. His research interests include public finance and urban and regional economics. Recent research projects include estimation of the sensitivity of city tax bases to tax rates and economic conditions, economic and fiscal interactions between cities and suburbs, and the economics of infrastructure investment. His publications have appeared in recent issues of the Journal of Public Economics, The Review of Economics and Statistics, and Brookings-Wharton Papers on Urban Affairs. Mr. Haughwout is a graduate of Swarthmore College and received his Ph.D. from the University of Pennsylvania in 1993.